Architecture Week Prague 2013

7th international festival of architecture Architecture Week Prague 2013 is organized under the patronage of the President of CR, Miloš Zeman, in the premises of the Convent of St. George at the Prague Castle from September 23 to October 20, 2013. The main theme of this year's festival is architectural heritage and contemporary architecture, and its aim is to present Czech as well as international historical architectural heritage and to enable its comparison with contemporary and newly emerging architecture. Exhibitions shown during the festival will present architecture of almost thirty Czech, Polish, and Slovak cities, modern and historical architecture of forty countries (this exhibition is traditionally prepared in cooperation with embassies and cultural institutes of the participating countries), and the festival will also present all monuments listed as UNESCO world heritage (745 monuments from 157 countries). Another part of the festival will be lectures by Czech and foreign architects taking place in the National Technical Library, exhibition openings, a conference, days of architecture of selected countries, days of cities, architectural walks, and other events that regular visitors of the festival are used to. The festival will be interesting for architecture students who will have the opportunity to explore a wide range of architectonic styles in one place, to observe impact of each period on modern and contemporary architecture and to evaluate possible connections and fusions of architecture in different times and different cultures. Students can thus live their studies up at the beginning of the new term.

Playful architect

There's something in store for children too: As a part of the festival there will be a new national project called Playful architect. It aims to introduce historical architecture to schoolchildren from 3rd and 4th grades, to show them what architectural heritage is and why is it important to care about it and protect it. Children had to draw or paint selected architectural monuments from their city. The best works will be shown in the Convent of St. George at the Prague Castle. Participating classes will have the opportunity to spend a day at the Prague Castle with interesting program including a guided tour to the exhibition Story of the Prague Castle, they'll get presents and above all will meet the First Lady of the CR, Ivana Zemanová, who is the patron of the whole project. The project will involve more than 600 children, 20 elementary schools from 20 cities all over the Czech Republic. We would like to set up a new tradition of annual meetings of schoolchildren at the beginning of the school year at the Prague Castle. We would also like to develop the project in the international context. Each year will have a special theme.
